Doctor Frank Luce Preaches Sermon "The Home and its Enemy, the Boss Devil."

THE REVEREND DOCTOR FRANK W. istor of the Maple Avenue M. E. Church.

At the Maple Avenue Methodist Episopal Church last evening, the pastor, the Reverend Doctor F. W. Luce, delivered the third of a series of sermon-lectures on the general topic, "The Home as a Finshed Product of the Process of Civilization." His subject last night was, "The and It's Enemy, the Boss Devil." These addresses are attracting large aufear not them that kill the body, but are not able to kill the soul; but rather feat not able to kill the soul; but rather fear him that is able to destroy both soul and body in hades." The address was a scathing indictment of the drink curse as an enemy of the home, childhood and womanhood. Among other things, he said:

"Of all the ills of satanic birth which roam the earth and strew their pathway with human wreckage, the drink curse is the masterful boss. There is scarcely a crime against God or man that is not in some cases of its committal inspired by drunkenness, and when under command of this demon all others become more daring and villainous.

"Others have slain their thousands, but the drink demon has slain his tens of thousands. Though he roams defiantly the walks of life, his home is in the haunts of death. He is more to be feared the walks of life, his home is in the haunts of death. He is more to be feared than pestilence, famine, liame, disease, war or deluge of death. These have power to torture and kill the body, while this king of demons is able to destroy both soul and body. This evil monster is the legitimate offspring of Satan. Wherever he goes he leaves in his pathway wrecked homes, shattered fortunes, blighted characters and broken hearts. He disturbs public peace, captivates private safety, waviays and assassinates childish innocences, bruises and crushes manly honor, tramples upon womanly virtue, dethrones human reason and enchains human souls. "He is set against all that is for human."

cences, bruises and crushes manly honor, tramples upon wemanly virtue, dethrones human reason and enchains human souls. "He is set against all that is for human happiness here and hereafter. He is cruci, heartless, relentless, defiant and ever active. He is never satisfied, though ever feeding upon virtue, honor and peace; ever thirsting for more, yet ever quaffing the blood of broken and crushed hearts mingled with the tears of suffering innocence. He is ever an open and sworn enemy to the home and the church, an ally of hell and a foe of heaven.

"The saloon as an institution is the chief agent of this master of evil, by which the victims are slain directly or indirectly." "Common sense, experience and observation in every realm open to the consideration of man corroborates the certainty of the test assigned by the Savior of the world as final, "wherefore by their fruits ye shall know them." The fruit of the American saloon as an institution can hardly be mistaken. To lend respectability to it, thinking thereby to rob it of its deadly sting, is folly of the purest kind and in the highest degree.

"Such procedure is like decorating a proven coward with a badge of bravery, clothing an ignoramus with cap and gown and furnishing him with certificates of knowledge or robing his satanic majesty with the garments of an angel of light. The evil may be made thus to appear more plearing and hence more deceiving, but a place where the principal purpose is the sale of intoxicating liquors as a beverage can never be other than an agent of evil under the direction of the boss devil, even though it be decorated with chaste art, have an episcopal blessing and the rattle of the cut-glass decanters he mingled with doxologles impiously directed to God." paraginsly of the Blessed Virgin and the saints of God commits the sin of blasphemey.

"God is, moreover, blasphemed when we utter contemptuous language against holy things. In this class of sins belong reviling, cursing and swearing. He who abuses the sacraments alone or in conjunction with other holy things blasphemes God in a horrible manner, and yet such blasphememies are common and seldom atoned for. "God is finally blasphemed when we wish him evil, or when we curse creatures, in so far as God has created thems. He who wishes that there were no God, or that God were dead, or that be had not the power to punish the wicked is guilty of the sin of blasphemy. He who curses the weather men or cattle, or anything else, in so far as God has created them, is guilty of blasphemy, according to St. Thomas, for the dishonoring of what God has made, does or ordains ultimately redounds to God himself."

The Reverend Louis A. Bowerman, partor of the Immanuel Baptist Church. preached yesterday morning on "The Proper Interpretation of Judgement." He said, in part:

"One of the surprising things in the study of divine truth is the remarkable influence of the early Catholic theology upon the doctrines held at the present influence of the early Catholic theology upon the doctrines held at the present time.

"In any discussion it is hard to get back past the fathers," and while we desire to know what other men have thought and as to how the Holy Word appealed to them, and what they saw in it, he is indeed a poor student that will not himself go back of all these and deal with the original rources. The Bible is itself the authority on all the matters of faths and practice, and the cry of Back to Christ has its meaning only in the searching into the Scriptures that tell of him.

"In regard to the question in hand, we yet wait for a well-defined exchatology that would be accepted by the general Christian world. For while the great mass still clings to the mediaeval era, there has been in the past generation a decided reaction; and certainly in the actions if not in the words a large proportion have loosed from the old moorings.

"Then some points the church is ceasing to be dogmatic, for the only apparent reason that she is not so certain with reference to the older teaching. The word judgment is used in two senses. In the legal, to give the final sentence of the court. In a general way, the mental operation by which acts, notions, motives, etc., are compared, and the deductions or conclusions form the basis of the reward or lack of reward. So the Christian is ever encouraged to trust Christ, who judgeth righteously, because he understands all the circumstances, the acts, motives, etc., and ifrespective of person will give the judgment and bestow the reward."

ready been passed. The soul that sinneth, it shall die.' Already the seed of death is working in the members of the sons of men.

"With reference to the destiny of the soul, that is a matter of the present and not of the future. The so-called general judgment is a manifestation before all the people and a vindication of

The divine righteousness. Men suppose that then they become 'goats' and 'sheep' by the judgment of God. They were goats or sheep ere they passed the portals into the unknown world. The manifestation and the separation are consequently very experience.

were goats or sheep ere they passed the portals into the unknown world. The mainlifestation and the separation are consequently very easy.

The line of separation in the economy of grace is the being 'in' or 'out' of Christ. Never to the Christian the fear of judgment, in the legal sense, is entirely taken away. He is not under condemnation and shall not come into judgment.

"Yet there is a judgment for the Christian, not to determine the question of his salvation, for that is determined by his faith in the Lord Jesus Christ, but Jesus, who is the Savior for him, is also in a true sense his judge. The judgment has to do with the Christian's status in the world of the redeemed. In this connection study well the parable of the talents. In this comes the question of reward and place—the entering in by the 'skin of the teeth' or the 'abundant' for which the apostic prayed, the crownless or the gaining of the crown.

"So long has the idea prevailed that all shall be alike that the Scripture's distinctions have been lost sight of. Savel by grace, but rewarded for faithfulness. It is in this that the last become first and first last. Leadership and position here do not mean leadership and position there. The question of faithfulness enters in, and the apostics encourage to this, because he is faithful and true' in every estimate of our actions, motives and impulses, and will reward not after the estimate of man, but after that which is righteous.

"Paul wrought not in order to be saved. That was done when the life of Jesus came into his soul. He began with the promptings of obedience, passing into the fellowship of love, and then 'he is weeking a reward.' In my coarse judgment he was seeking the place mide vacant by Judas, and if any are worthy to be among the twelve, certainly Paul was one.

"Thus the man mleunderstood, often purposely, maligned and sander

"The time has come for the planter to market his own crop, and this can be done only by the establishment of a system of cotton warehouses throughout the cotton belt. Cotton is the most valuable product in the United States, its value list season being about $500,000,000 but the planter does not get his just proportion of this enormous wealth, while a lot of men, some of them who probably never saw a bale of cotton, have made immense fortunes out of the staple. What we want is to keep the cotton in the hands of the producer, and let him fix the price.

This can be done by organizing substituting companies in each cotton-producing State, and instead of rushing cotton to the market, as had been done in the past. If the price is not satisfactory, let the planter store his cotton, the warehouse receipt being negotiable paper at any bank, because it represents so many bales of cotton. REPUBLIC SPECIAL.

Joplin. Mo., Sept. 25. Strenuous competition for the limited output of the zinc ore of the district has resulted in forcing prices upward $2.50 per ton during the week, an advance of $5 per ton in two weeks.

It is a case of trying to supply a demand of 5,000 tons per week with an output of 5,000 tons per week a situation that has wiped out the reserve stock entirely and is causing many of the purchasing agents for the smelling componies to resort to contracting for the ore before it is mined.

Failure of the Western output of zinc ore to meet the expectations of the smelters is one of the causes of the exceptionally strong prices that are higher than at any time since April, 1852 the boom year, when zinc ore reached 55 per for.
